I just received a call from Karen Essary. Karen verified that your private email address is still hidden, so it's likely that they got the address via a cc or forward of an email with your address on it.

We can have Karen set up a filter on your account so emails from that address are sent directly to spam. Or we can set up a new email address for you and have this one forwarded to CR. Janice Joe and I have briefly discussed the idea of getting Leo, Pat, Tom, and Click together the first week in September for a meeting to review road and infrastructure projects that could lead to significant economic development and jobs. The idea is to identify those projects where we can make a difference quickly, rank them, and then review with you and OMB and COS.

Excellent idea. I'll do it. I can be there all day Wednesday, then not again for awhile. If lawmakers leave Juneau we can do a reception in Anchorage at any time this next week.

Governor,

Sorry. One more thing: I think you need one more reception just to get the pulse of the legislators and see where they're coming from at this point. Proponents are getting restless, critics are delaying a decision. Perhaps pulling everyone together in one mansion just for an informal reception might be good after you return. I'll rely on you to tell me what's good timing, or if it's a good idea or good timing at all.

Thanks,

Just an FYI, the RGA event times on the calendar are wrong, the event locations are wrong, apparently they changed this morning's breakfast from open to 'executive committee only' which was embarassing for me finding out so late and it was not necessary for the Gov to attend. Christie said she emailed you the updated schedule and briefing on Thursday - did you get it from her? If not, let me know so that I can address it with them if we're not getting what we need. My fault that I didn't realize until too late that there was no briefing info..

In all of our busyness, we need to figure out a better system, help, etc. Thanks.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE No. 08-118

Governor Lauds Oil Industry Development

July 14, 2008, Anchorage,Alaska – BP announced today that it had sanctioned the development of its Liberty prospect in the federal waters in the Beaufort Sea Outer Continental Shelf. BP will push the envelope of technology by drilling ultra extended reach wells, with the largest land rig in the world. This technology will minimize the impact of the Liberty development on the environment.

"I want to congratulate Alaska's oil industry and our Department of Natural Resources for these pro-development achievements," Governor Palin said. "Our state has the resources and the people to address the nation's energy needs. Alaska remains an attractive and inviting place for oil and gas industry investment. I look forward to more good news in the future."

When production begins in 2011, the state will share in the royalties paid by BP to the federal government. Under existing law, the state will receive 27 percent of the royalties or almost 5 million barrels over the life of the project. The state and other producers on the North Slope will also benefit from potentially lower tariffs on the TAPS pipeline. At its peak in 2014, Liberty will produce 40,000 barrels per day and contribute to an increase of 6 percent of total TAPS throughput.

BP's Liberty announcement comes along after a string of good news in Alaska's oil patch. ConocoPhillips last week announced "first oil" from its Qannik prospect in the Colville River

Unit. Qannik production will peak in 2009 at 4,000 barrels per day. With potential expansion the prospect may yield over 25 million barrels. On June 13, 2008, Pioneer began production from its Oooguruk field. Oooguruk is a 90 million barrel oil field that will reach peak production of 20,000 barrels per day in 2010. Pioneer is one of the new independents now working in Alaska and is the only independent operator on the North Slope. Soon to follow Pioneer as operator of a new producing oil field is the major Italian oil company ENI which sanctioned the neighboring Nikiatchuq oil field in January 2008. Development of this oil field is now underway.

I think we could speed it up. If it is alright with you, I would like to get John Reeves involved in this initial process of identifying projects and getting good descriptions for the commissioners to consider and prioritize.

I think he has the time and I really like working with him.

I can get together with him on the phone this afternoon and explain what we are looking to prepare and I bet he gets started right away.

Governor:

Leo is in a 6 hour managers meeting. I will follow up with him this afternoon on a response. Joe and I have briefly discussed the idea of getting Leo, Pat, Tom, and Click together the first week in September for a meeting to review road and infrastructure projects that could lead to significant economic development and jobs. The idea is to identify those projects where we can make a difference quickly, rank them, and then review with you and OMB and COS.

Leo- I've heard that there's been preliminary work done on the idea of building a road to connect us to our resources in Nome. True? That'd be great if it's true. What's the cost? We need to start building infrastructure- esp in areas where the residents truly want the roads.

Pls give me a status report on Nome Rd plan. Thanks

BP sanctions Liberty development

This morning BP said it has sanctioned development of its Liberty oil prospect, which is offshore northern Alaska in the Beaufort Sea.

The $1.5 billion development plan for Liberty entails the drilling of six ultra-extended reach development wells from existing near-shore facilities at the Endicott satellite island under the Beaufort Sea to the Liberty reservoir, which is some five miles offshore the North Slope. The drilling would involve horizontal departures of 34,000 to 44,000 feet, requiring the use of a purpose-built rig that will be the largest land rig in the world, BP has said.

Using the Endicott satellite island allows BP to produce Liberty without building a remote offshore island and pipeline infrastructure, thus significantly reducing the environmental impact of the new development. \u8232 ?First production from Liberty is expected in 2011.

BP expects to recover about 100 million barrels of oil from Liberty. The company has said the reservoir is "high quality with wells capable of delivering 15,000 barrels of oil per day or more initial production."

Liberty was discovered by BP in 1997, and is one of the largest undeveloped light oil fields in the BP Alaska portfolio.

The BP-operated Endicott field is east of Prudhoe Bay. It came online in 1987 and was the world's first producing offshore Arctic oil field. Endicott is linked to shore with a 1.5-mile gravel causeway.

Governor, All,
The Port Authority purchased some type of option on the Yukon Pacific Corp' (YPC) assets. YPC had a 1989 export license out of Valdez. However, there is NO WAY that DOE would allow that ancient license to proceed without undergoing another complete review and, in all probability it would not be approved. That is what DOE is saying - they will not allow the old license to be used without a review and when they review the old license they won't approve it.

Furthermore, even if DOE would approve it, Congress would pass an export ban on Alaska gas. This is what Senator Stevens told the Alaska Legislature and Alaska press this week in Juneau. Specifically, Stevens referred to US Rep Pelosi's announcement this week indicating the Democrats are considering an energy bill that would include an export ban on Alaska oil.

Marty

The online "411" with the State is the outside email that goes to Constituent Affairs (sarah.palin@alaska.gov).

The only google hit was on Newsminer's blog a blogger named "5050" back on April 17th put out the govpalin@alaska.gov address in response to an editorial by Chris Eshelman.

Someone in Fairbanks has it...and is handing it out.

That's an easy one to change if you'd like us to do so.

I would like to know what happen to the "All Alaskan Pipeline"? I am tired of the high cost of fuel in Fairbanks and Anchorage pays cheaper for fuel than Fairbanks. All three of you need to go to http://www.fairbanksgas.com/ and find out what the problem is and find a solution to it. I have already petitioned the federal congressional delegation about stopping oil speculation buying crude oil that is driving crude oil price up.

I want a gasline that will benefit all Alaskans not just a few communities. I believe this proposal only benefits Anchorage and not Fairbanks or the State of Alaska. There needs to be more proposal submit before jumping on the first one that comes around.

Thank you

The online "411" with the State is the outside email that goes to Constituent Affairs (sarah.palin@alaska.gov).

The only google hit was on Newsminer's blog a blogger named "5050" back on April 17th put out the govpalin@alaska.gov address in response to an editorial by Chris Eshelman.

Someone in Fairbanks has it...and is handing it out.

That's an easy one to change if you'd like us to do so.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE No. 08-118

Governor Lauds Oil Industry Development

July 14, 2008, Anchorage, Alaska - BP announced today that it had sanctioned the development of its Liberty prospect in the federal waters in the Beaufort Sea Outer Continental Shelf. BP will push the envelope of technology by drilling ultra extended reach wells, with the largest land rig in the world. This technology will minimize the impact of the Liberty development on the environment.

"I want to congratulate Alaska's oil industry and our Department of Natural Resources for these pro-development achievements," Governor Palin said. "Our state has the resources and the people to address the nation's energy needs. Alaska remains an attractive and inviting place for oil and gas industry investment. I look forward to more good news in the future."

When production begins in 2011, the state will share in the royalties paid by BP to the federal government. Under existing law, the state will receive 27 percent of the royalties or almost 5 million barrels over the life of the project. The state and other producers on the North Slope will also benefit from potentially lower tariffs on the TAPS pipeline. At its peak in 2014, Liberty will produce 40,000 barrels per day and contribute to an increase of 6 percent of total TAPS throughput.

BP's Liberty announcement comes along after a string of good news in Alaska's oil patch. ConocoPhillips last week announced "first oil" from its Qannik prospect in the Colville River Unit. Qannik production will peak in 2009 at 4,000 barrels per day. With potential expansion the prospect may yield over 25 million barrels. On June 13, 2008, Pioneer began production from its Oooguruk field. Oooguruk is a 90 million barrel oil field that will reach peak production of 20,000 barrels per day in 2010. Pioneer is one of the new independents now working in Alaska and is the only independent operator on the North Slope. Soon to follow Pioneer as operator of a new producing oil field is the major Italian oil company ENI which sanctioned the neighboring Nikiatchuq oil field in January 2008. Development of this oil field is now underway.

NEWS BULLETIN

July 14, 2008 --- Vol. 14, No. 78 July 2008

BP sanctions Liberty development

This morning BP said it has sanctioned development of its Liberty oil prospect, which is offshore northern Alaska in the Beaufort Sea.

The $1.5 billion development plan for Liberty entails the drilling of six ultra-extended reach development wells from existing near-shore facilities at the Endicott satellite island under the Beaufort Sea to the Liberty reservoir, which is some five miles offshore the North Slope. The drilling would involve horizontal departures of 34,000 to 44,000 feet, requiring the use of a purpose-built rig that will be the largest land rig in the world, BP has said.

Using the Endicott satellite island allows BP to produce Liberty without building a remote offshore island and pipeline infrastructure, thus significantly reducing the environmental impact of the new development. First production from Liberty is expected in 2011.

BP expects to recover about 100 million barrels of oil from Liberty. The company has said the reservoir is "high quality with wells capable of delivering 15,000 barrels of oil per day or more initial production."

Liberty was discovered by BP in 1997, and is one of the largest undeveloped light oil fields in the BP Alaska portfolio.

The BP-operated Endicott field is east of Prudhoe Bay. It came online in 1987 and was the world's first producing offshore Arctic oil field. Endicott is linked to shore with a 1.5-mile gravel causeway.

This is crazy pricing! It's getting outrageous in Alaska, too. In most urban areas it's nearing $5.00/gallon. And in our rural areas it can be as high as $10.00.

We're really trying to ramp up production of our safe, domestic supplies of energy that Alaska has plenty of. Please tell everyone to support our efforts to drill, pump and produce more energy from our Alaskan resources.

R- when Katz has our anwr letter ready to go (hopefully today!) we need to send it to all the Alaskan media outlets, but also other newspapers across the US as he wrote such good reasoning in asking Congress when will they finally "get it"? Thanks

When Eloy and I went to Pohnpei in January of this year, the price of gasoline was already $4.00 a gallon. Today, it's $6.20 per gallon and still going up.

Governor, All,

The Port Authority purchased some type of option on the Yukon Pacific Corp' (YPC) assets. YPC had a 1989 export license out of Valdez. However, there is NO WAY that DOE would allow that ancient license to proceed without undergoing another complete review and, in all probability it would not be approved. That is what DOE is saying - they will not allow the old license to be used without a review and when they review the old license they won't approve it.

Furthermore, even if DOE would approve it, Congress would pass an export ban on Alaska gas. This is what Senator Stevens told the Alaska Legislature and Alaska press this week in Juneau. Specifically, Stevens referred to US Rep Pelosi's announcement this week indicating the Democrats are considering an energy bill that would include an export ban on Alaska oil.

Marty

According to DOE there will NOT be amd there IS no export license! Correct me if I'm wrong, tom/marty... But that's what Slutz told me yesterday even. We need to get the word out on that one,,, also that today's Congress is also saying no license.

Bizarre. Almost like sending a press release out multiple times huh??

anyhoo...i'm checking on that line about the export license in this ad. didn't think that was accurate.

at least they're getting the "columns" right finally.
